KATY BAR ASSOCIATION 2017 LAW DAY COMPETITION

By Elizabeth Pratt

For many years, the Katy Bar Association has sponsored a scholarship program. The selection criteria and amounts awarded have varied over time, but two constants that have guided each year's competition are KBA's focus on encouraging students to pursue post-secondary education or training and increasing awareness of the value of our country's legal system. Beginning in 2016, we decided to base our program on the themes of the State Bar of Texas's Law Day celebration and coordinate our local competition with the State Bar's statewide Law Day competition. Law Day is the annual celebration of the system of laws that guide and support our way of life. The competition theme this year is "The 14th Amendment: Transforming American Democracy." The KBA opened its competition to all KISD high school students, inviting them to submit editorials responding to this prompt: "Why is it important that all people receive equal protection of the laws?" The editorials received in response were thoughtful, scholarly, and inspiring. Each student tackled the prompt with different perspectives. Selecting the winners was a difficult task.

Ultimately, our Education/Scholarship Committee chose the following winners:

First	Jun-Yong Kim	Seven Lakes High School
Second	Parisa Jesudasen	Tompkins High School
Third	Emily Palmer	Cinco Ranch High School
Honorable Mention	Iyanla Smith	Mayde Creek High School

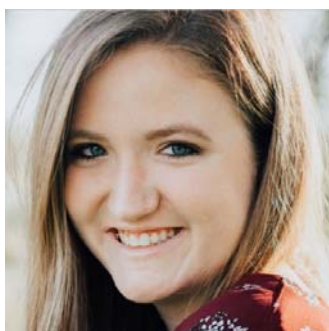

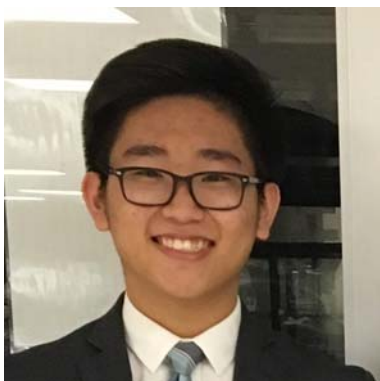

The KBA will award the students monetary recognition ranging from $250 to $1,500 to be used for educational purposes. The awards will be presented to the students at our April 25, 2017 general meeting. KBA has invited the parents and principals of the students to attend as our guests.

The State Bar invites each local bar association to submit its first place winner to the State Bar's statewide competition, so we entered Jun-Yong's editorial and were thrilled and honored to learn that his essay had been chosen as the FIRST PLACE editorial in the statewide Law Day contest. The State Bar has invited Jun-Yong to attend the award luncheon in Austin on May 1, 2017, where his editorial will be read as part of the program. Congratulation, Jun-Yong!

The Katy Bar Association simply could not be any prouder of these students. Whenever you hear curt dismissals of Generation Z, keep these winners (and our other contestants) in mind. They are proof that our future will be guided by caring, open-minded, and intelligent people.

In honor of Law Day 2017, we share the winning essays in their entirety in this newsletter.

The Katy Bar Association also thanks the members of the Education/Scholarship Committee for their service in designing and promoting the competition, reviewing the submissions, and arranging for recognition of our winners at our April luncheon. Stu Levin chaired the committee, which consists of Andrew Weisblatt, David Frishman, Teresa Lechner-Fish, Gerald Zimmerer, Rehan Alimohammad, and Elizabeth Pratt.

JUN-YONG KIM

"Monsters of My American Dream"

My boogeyman didn't come from my closet with four flailing arms - it came from school in the form of twenty-six letters. After moving to the United States from South Korea, I sat helpless in classrooms with my limited arsenal of words as the beast of the English alphabet overwhelmed me. I watched my peers laugh and yell while I was spoon-fed the American Dream in an unintelligible language. From the beginning, our country has clashed when interpreting what the 14th Amendment truly guarantees. We've vacillated in ideology, from Plessy v Ferguson to Brown v Board of Education. But when it comes to parity in schools, it's not so much about who's right, but rather, who's left. Without the 14th Amendment, millions in the United States would be left not only without proper rights, but more importantly the opportunity to thrive. Sure, the pursuit of equality is far from easy. But the United States is America because it chooses not what's easy, but what's best. Luckily, America has given me every opportunity to keep up with my English speaking peers. In the 1974 Supreme Court case Lau v

Nichols, Justice William Douglass argued," students who do not understand English are effectively foreclosed from any meaningful education," in essence violating the 14th Amendment. The Lau decision disallowed for ignoring English learners and paved the pathway to ESL programs for students like me, in need of extra assistance. No more did I cower in the face of the English language; with bilingual programs to integrate me into society, I was able to break the wall of language holding me back. No more am I hopeless; instead, I now use English as my tool to not just explain my thoughts, but to provide a voice to the voiceless. My local school district, Katy ISD, has been integral to my academic awakening. It prides itself on truly leaving no child behind with its promise to not "discriminate on the basis of sex, disability, race, religion, color, gender, age, or national origin", and hence has become one of the best in the state. For the fourth year in a row, every campus met all four accountability indexes of performance, including increased academic achievement for economically disadvantaged students and underperforming ethnicities. Katy ISD has been a champion of acceptance, equality, and has become a bastion of exemplary performance. That's what equal protection under laws provides- it gives every student herein Katy the ability to dream without fear of discrimination based on color, money, or gender, from the immigrant to the impoverished to the handicapped alike. I once was told that the American Dream is called that because you have to be asleep to believe in it. I beg to differ. The American guarantee of equality has instead shackled my nightmares and freed me to dream in real life. The monsters in my closet are on an unending Sabbatical; the only beast left is my drive to capitalize on every opportunity equal protection offers me.

PARISA JESUDASEN

The Equal Protection Clause has been a center of controversy for many years seeing as it is easily applicable to a variety of situations and circumstances. So what makes such a simple principle a source of such public discord? I believe that one of the most important principles of American History is the promise of freedom and the guarantee of protection under the law. It is important that all people receive equal protection to continue support of American-held values, prevent historical disasters, and because it is logically sound for the perseverance of a fair society. John Locke led beliefs of natural rights; innate freedoms that all human beings were guaranteed and such enlightenment thinking led a few British colonists to form one of the greatest nations in history. Human beings are all divergent with contrasting ideals, desires, talents, and skills, but deep down beneath our differences we are all human beings. The rights of freedoms that inspired nations was not a new discovery but an awakening of the reality that we are all connected and deserving of the same things; we are all human. Humans deserving the same privileges and protections; necessary for the prevention of disillusionment. Equal protection, unfortunately has not been guaranteed to others in the past. Beliefs that not all human beings deserved the right to protection, or even humane treatment is a part of our country's past. When we denied equal protection to individuals what did it lead to? Complete and utter disillusionment and polarization. Our country fought an entire war against themselves and the spent decades trying to redirect the nation. All people deserve protection because denying anyone freedom is distorting the beliefs of freedom itself and allowing it and America to become destroyed. Equal protection under the law and its application to all people is important because it not only stands for the ideal and principles of our founding fathers, but also the realities of humanity. There is no person greater than another or more deserving of freedoms, it is a choice to be exercised by all and a guarantee that not only is the foundation of our being but an instrumental part of the creation of America. The thing about equality is that it is not something that can be given, but something that every individual has the capacity to receive. Insurance that every individual is provided with the same rights, treatments, and protections ensures that every individual can live up to their potential and improve the quality of life and society as a whole. It is in the best interest of a fair society to instill within its member's beliefs of equality to create stronger relationships between individuals and help inspire everyone toward a common goal. Disenfranchising one people group from this equal protection hurts society more than helps it by ensuring defiance against laws rather than compliance and destruction in the trust and authority of a ruling body. Equal protection for all is necessary for a fruitful and strong nation.

Emily Palmer
"The Necessity of Equality"

America was founded upon distinct and essential ideals that have shaped our nation. Although these virtues have not always been acted upon or followed, our country continues to come back to them and thrive due to their impact. In one of the most important articles of history-The Declaration of Independence-it is stated, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness." Without equal rights being made accessible to all, the foundation our country was built upon crumbles. Equal rights hold an important and valuable place in my heart not only because of the historical importance of them, but also because I have seen the impact they can have in the lives of those who in many other countries are deemed "unequal" or "invalid". One of my deepest passions is the care of and love for those with special needs. I have seen in the lives of those who have mental and physical disabilities how significant basic rights can be. Without their being viewed as equal, they are unable to function as normal and valued members of society along with their peers. The fourteenth amendment calls for privileges to be made accessible to all just as rights are. Because of this standard of equality set forth in both the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, I have gotten the opportunity to see children and young adults at a camp specifically for those with disabilities ride horses, sail across the sky on a zip line, and splash around in a swimming pool. I have been able to help in a classroom of a young boy who was refused the right to an education in his country overseas but then graciously accepted and valued in a school in this nation. I have heard of students who were able to graduate college, join the work force, and stand up for rights despite their physical and mental hindrances. These are only a few of the many times I have seen equal rights radically influence the lives of others. There are so many other stories and so many other people who are affected by equal rights and who are enabled to live the lives they love and have dreamed of. Equal rights are necessary because without them America is not by the people and for the people. Equal rights play important roles across many different categories people may fall in, but watching the way they completely shape the lives of those with disabilities makes me proud to live in a country that promises equality to all and views it as a necessity not just when it is convenient.

Iyanla Smith

Why is it important that all people receive 'equal protection of the laws'?

Imagine having to reside in a world where you couldn't vote at all no matter how old you are, not being able to get a driver's license and drive or not being able to get a job and make money. People nowadays couldn't even imagine being in that situation. Everyone in our society deserves to have the same and equal opportunities to excel in life and achieve their goals. It is important for all people to be equal under the laws because, as a country, we want to be that example for the world. We must set the standard of treating all human beings equally and fairly. It's important for the advancement of the country so we don't stay stagnant and continue to better the economy and the community. This in many ways, allowed people to be closer to achieving 'the American dream'. "In the definition of the American Dream by James Truslow Adams in 1931, "life should be better and richer and fuller for everyone, with opportunity for each according to ability or achievement" regardless of social class or circumstances of birth." Everyone being treated justly under the laws gave each future generation the opportunity to thrive in America. This is why we have so many successful people in the U.S. today and even more working their way up. It's up to each person to work hard if they want to achieve their goals. Over the years, the 14th amendment has helped to solve many court cases where people were being treated unfairly e.g. Brown v. Board of Education and Gideon v. Wainwright to name a few. Brown v. Board of Education was very significant because it eliminated segregation between schools. It allowed for African Americans and Caucasians to go to the same school. In the case of Gideon v. Wainwright, Gideon was poor when he was convicted of his crime thus unable to pay for his own attorney, yet the court declined his request for one. The United States Supreme Court applied the 14th amendment to the case making it mandatory to provide an accused person an attorney. All of these examples were enormous steps to our country becoming equal but we need to keep working to make the country fairer. Women and men should receive the same pay for the same jobs, all children should have the opportunity to go to a good school. No matter where we start in life, we should all be allowed a fighting chance to get ahead. That's all that parents hope for their child, i.e. the American dream.

KBA JUDGE SARAH SPRINGER SCHOLARSHIP

In honor of Sarah Springer's professionalism and dedicated service to the bar, three donations totaling $2000 were made to the Katy Bar Association and designated for Sarah to determine as a scholarship. The Board approved this honor and Sarah, Rebecca Hafner, and Teresa Lechner-Smith worked together on a committee to determine the qualifications for this scholarship award. It was decided that a scholarship should be awarded to a University of Houston student from the Katy area. The Judge Sarah Springer Scholarship will be awarded to Alexandra D. Tijerina at the upcoming Dean's Awards Day at the University of Houston. The program will describe the scholarship as follows:

Judge Sarah Springer Scholarship

The Katy Bar Association established the Judge Sarah Springer Scholarship to recognize her service to the Katy Bar and her passion for family law. This scholarship is awarded to a student who is a current or past Katy, Texas resident, demonstrates financial need and has an interest in family law.

Donor: Katy Bar Association

UPDATE ON HARRIS COUNTY CIVIL COURT BUILDING ELEVATORS

From Judge David Farr: I know that there has been tremendous frustration with the status of the elevators at 201 Caroline so I am sending this update in order to bring you collectively current on that issue. Harris County is undergoing a modernization of all 6 elevators to floors 8 to 17 in the Civil Courthouse. That means they are replacing equipment, such as drives, controls, electronics, cables, etc. The Harris County Commissioners Court voted yesterday to bypass the bid process and to go directly to Otis Elevator to begin this process. It will take approximately 16 weeks to manufacture and deliver the new equipment. Once the new equipment is delivered, it will take an estimated 6 months to complete the installation (March 2018). The work will be done 2 elevators at a time. If they can do 3 at a time they will. Because of the problems with the upper level elevators the freight elevator has been used for the general public during the highest traffic period of 7:30 am to 9:30 am. Unfortunately, the freight elevator sustained water damage last week due to a relief valve that failed. The parts to repair this elevator have been delivered and it will take another 2 weeks (estimated) to complete that repair. The good news is that there will be newly repaired (and different brand of) elevators this time next year. Meanwhile, we will continue to use the freight elevator when available so please be mindful of delays as to your arrival times for dockets and as to late calls to the courts. Thank you for your patience as the county works through these issues.
